Season's Change

I feel myself packing in the lawn furniture.
 It's not easy.
I've been rearranged some since the last fall
 _and it is hard to make things fit.
There does not appear to be enough room.
 Some things will have to go.
Now comes the sorting through.

I am not alone.
I share this journey with the Oaks.
 Acorns dropped.
Then comes the leaves.
 What next?
 We wonder.

They say, again, it's going to be a hard winter.
Dry again, generally, except for the occasion floods.

Do I have what I need?
 What do I need?
 What do I,
 _do I,
 _do?

Hue-manifested Being.

One day at a time.
One breath at a time.
