

www.plantsandhealers.org

FEAR NOTHING

By Frank Cook

Fear of nothing

Though ambiguous

Says a lot about our language

If in fact we fear

That there is nothing

Then how can there be there?

Am I totally clear?

Put in a totally new light
From another's sight

How can one know fear
(or the lack of there)

If fear of nothing
means not fearing fear?

I come then to a conclusion
With a simple allusion

That fear is neither here nor there
But a state of being here rather than there